Mr. President, Ladies and Gentlemen.

No person understands more perfectly than I the proprieties of this occasion; no person knows better than I that you came here for recreation, instruction and entertainment; and that you have come here to listen to long, tedious speeches. All I have to say will be encompassed within a few moments, and that I might not tire you too early, I will spend the period I have mentioned. I have carefully thought out the few words, which

Although this exhibition has received contributions from all the New England States, yet the methodizing of the exhibits and the manner of successfully displaying it are to no inconsiderable extent the work of the fair.

Look where you will; on the ground among the cattle; in the stalls among the horses; in the pens where sheep and swine of rare and valuable breeds have found temporary shelter in the hall where ingenuity has wrought out those valuable works for the aid of humanity; in the tents where art has devised the means to supply scores of human hands by the most simple agricultural implements, or, in this vast hall, groups of men, women and children, who are engaged in the manufacture of goods that you will find it no easy matter to make the truth of the following statement.

It is too early to state accurately the receipts, but it is believed that they will exceed $20,000, which is certainly most gratifying and encouraging. The good order which has characterized the exhibit throughout is one of its most remarkable features. We invite the attention of Farmers to this New Invention which has been thoroughly tested, and which we place upon the market, perfected in all its parts, and adapted to spreading all kinds of manure. It is not only a Great Labor Saving Machine, but it does its work better than can possibly be done by any other machine. It is simple in its construction, yet or light, heavy or light. It is regulated to spread different quantities to the acre, so that the farmer can use just what amount per acre he desires, and the time required to spread a load is from two to three minutes without manual labor. This is a saving of time and labor is only of secondary importance, as compared with the quality of work it does.

Good judges have decided that manure spread as even and pulverized as fine as this Cart leaves it. It receives, immediately, full benefit of the manure. It can be attached to the fore wheels of any ordinary farm wagon.

★ This Cart will do all we advertise for it. Manufactured by the
